Benefits Of VIAGRA For Men

1

Am a doctor posted at the rural health center at a very remote village which is far away from the city. The nearest city is about six hours drive away. This place is beautiful, quiet and serene and the people are cheerful and fun loving.

We have a fifty bed hospital with a small OT and Lab which makes the entire unit self sufficient. We also have an outpatient department which works five days a week. I am the resident doctor and my team is supported by two nurses, one pharmacist and two assistants.

Our job is routine and predictable. Women and children queue up to visit the clinic in the morning from nine am until five pm followed by a stream of men visiting late in the evening until seven pm.

We take in all kinds of medical cases both in Outpatient and Inpatient department. Most often cases related to simple fever and cold with children and women. Women come in for deliveries too as this is the only facility available to them.

As this is a very small place, every one knows each other well and help out in times. We have a good tie up with the local post office. We order medicines from the city pharmacy over the phone and the post office delivery van which visits the city picks up our deliveries twice a week and this has helped us maintain our stocks well. The village does have two drug stores which stock medicines too.

Recently a very young mother of two children came to see my at the clinic. She apparently had no problems and wouldn't come out with what she wanted to see me for. She was very shy to speak up. After a few minutes she slowly took out a piece of paper which was torn and tattered and asked if I could re write the prescription for her. Looking at the prescription I was amused, for it was a prescription for Viagra.

Further enquiry gave me the information that her husband had been prescribed Viagra two years ago when he visited a doctor to check out as to why they did not have children and she had not conceived after three years of marriage. They believed that the wonder drug Viagra had helped them to conceive and they were blessed with two children.

Now it seemed that her husband was very low on energy and not showing any interest in physical relationship with her and this made her feel very insecure. Trying to look for a cure, she had remembered the Viagra and taken out the prescription which was so very old and presented at the drug store only to be turned away. She had been asked to get a new prescription from the doctor.

I was amazed at the ingenuity of the woman. Though not educated, she had understood that Viagra was responsible for the increased libido of her man. She was also clear that a good physical relationship between husband and wife was required to ensure the wellbeing of the marriage. Men buy Viagra online every day.

Of course I did ask her to come back with her husband and explained to both of them how Viagra cures erectile dysfunction in men and prescribed daily dosage of Viagra 100 mg tablets to be consumed orally after testing the patient. You can safely buy Viagra online.
